SERVICES & INDUSTRIES

Significant population growth, uneven population distribution, limited employment opportunities, and the allure of high salaries and promised benefits have led to the phenomenon of labor migration. Consequently, these laborers became known as Migrant Workers. In Indonesia, this term specifically refers to Indonesian Migrant Workers, both men and women, who are dispersed across various countries.

The deployment of Indonesian Migrant Workers continues to economically developed nations across Asia, such as Taiwan, Singapore, Brunei, South Korea, Japan, and Malaysia, as well as to several Middle Eastern countries, including Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Qatar, and Kuwait. This ongoing migration is driven by the high demand for labor in these destination countries, coupled with the limited employment opportunities and insufficient wages in Indonesia.

The Indonesian government's initiative to deploy Indonesian Migrant Workers (IMWs) abroad is a pivotal national program aimed at elevating workforce welfare, fostering quality human resources, and bolstering the prosperity of their families. This endeavor leverages the international job market while emphasizing the enhancement of workforce competencies and comprehensive protection from pre-departure to reintegration into Indonesia. It upholds the fundamental right of every worker to dignified work and fair income, ensuring equitable distribution of employment opportunities and workforce alignment with national and regional development imperatives.
